Develop Questions:

It is often helpful to have a few questions prepared ahead of time to guide your conversation. Additional or follow up questions will come to mind while you are doing the interview.

Consider these points when developing your questions:

- Why does the person/organization care about this issue?
- Are they working on your issue now? If so, in what ways?
- Have they done work on this issue in the past?
- Do they have ideas about how you might get involved in the issue?
- Who else would they suggest you talk to?

Based on your purpose, write 5-8 questions that you can use.
